Let's make the best out of the lifestyle we are going to adopt

Social distancing is here to stay and we all need to learn and adapt at best.

To stop COVID-19, we had to dramatically change our complete lifestyle: from work to sports, passing through the education of our children.

Health Care Systems changed too: keep people separated in order to fight the spread of the virus turned out to be a very challenging task and many Health disciplines will never be the same anymore.

We are all learning from what we faced: some things will take months to get back to normal, some will be changed forever.

Let's make the best out of the lifestyle we are going to adopt

Surely, we will face changes in our daily life in terms of proximity with other people: maybe in movie theaters there will be half of their seats and maybe gyms will require you to book an appointment, just like your customers do with their patients...

...and what about Physiotherapy?

In the short term, we reckon many patients might feel skeptical to the physical approach with doctors and therapists: they are now getting used to the social distance, but at the same time are in need of the rehabilitation treatments.

So, how will professionals overcome this psychological barrier?
